

Gandhi Jayanti Speech

Government Function at Raj Ghat, New Delhi

250 words

Respected dignitaries, distinguished guests, my dear friends, Namaste!

Introduction

Today, on the sacred ground of Raj Ghat, we stand where a grateful nation bids its eternal farewell to Bapu. On the second of October, 1869, in Porbandar, a child was born who would teach the world that the mightiest force on earth is not the sword, but the soul. We gather to honour Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of our Nation.

Body

Bapu never commanded armies; he commanded conscience. Through satyagraha, he armed a hungry, divided people with truth and non-violence, and shook an empire that boasted the sun never set upon it. When he walked to Dandi in 1930, he carried no weapon, only a handful of salt and an unshakeable faith. In that simple act, millions of hopes found one voice. His life was his message. He spun his own cloth, cleaned his own surroundings, and taught us that dignity of labour and service to the last person are the true measure of a nation. Today, the United Nations observes this day as the International Day of Non-Violence, and the world echoes what India always knew.

Conclusion

Yet, friends, garlands alone cannot honour Gandhi. Let us honour him by being honest in our work, tolerant in our differences, and clean in our habits and our thoughts. Let us build the India of his dreams, where no one is left behind. Let his spirit forever guide every single citizen, every classroom, every home, and every government office.

Thank you. Jai Hind! Vande Mataram!

Delivery tips

Pause after “not the sword, but the soul.” Slow down on “a handful of salt and an unshakeable faith.” Lift your voice on “Jai Hind!” so the audience can respond.
